“ It is with deep sadness write this but; I found it is comforting to express how and what you feel. I have known Mae Belle, for a few years started back in the late 70s. She was always a gentle, kind, and loving Mother as well as just someone to talk too. Her heart was always generous and she always welcomed you in whenever you visit. To her children, it may be a sad time right now in your lives but, just remember sadness will only last for a little while as God, promises joy will come in the morning. Pray on and keep her memories alive in your hearts.

A Dear Friend,

“ I remember Mae Belle from her early years when we were in the fifth/sixth grades before I moved to Washington, DC. I visited her home many times to listen to her brother play the guitar and he played so well. It was so nice to have a friend to visit and share school events with. Mae Belle was a home body and she loved her family dearly. She sometimes acted like a little mother to her siblings as I observed her doing chores around the home. I shall miss her smiling face and our talks about our growing up years. My deepest sympathy goes out to the family. I pray that the precious memories you hold in your heart will serve as comfort to you as you face the days ahead. I shall remember each of you in my prayers. May the Lord grant you strength and comfort today and always.
